FUNSTON SCARES LEA

Honolulu Chinese Cadets Might Also Need Scaring.

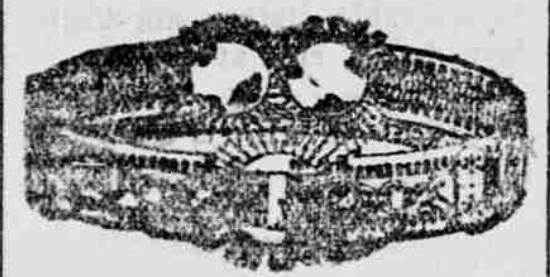

Brig.-General Funston, U. S. A., of the Department of California has given a scare to "General" Homer Lea, the Chinese reformer and organizer of Chinese "Cadet" companies on the mainland. That scare to the head man of the organization may extend to Honolulu, for there is a company of Chinese "cadets" here, according to the story which comes from San Francisco, which is one of the links of "General" Lea's military chain. These companies are eventually to be moulded into the nucleus of an army which is to overthrow the Chinese throne.

That there is a Chinese company, here, uniformed and being drilled, is a fact. When the Japanese reserves held their famous maneuvers at Kaimuki many months ago, under the direction of Lieut. Kurakawa of the Japanese Imperial Guard, the Chinese company was there in khaki and leggings, and took an active part in the proceedings. In fact it was one of the companies assigned to the assaulting column. This company is being drilled by Lieut. Kuraka; orders being given in Japanese. The San Francisco Chronicle tells the following story of how Funston has disapproved of these Chinese "cadet" companies, and the scare he gave, "General" Lea:

When "General" Homer Lea, commander of the forces in the United States of the Chinese Reform Association, invited General Frederick Funston, commander of the Department of California, United States Army, to dine with him he committed the strategic and diplomatic mistake of his career. He did not see it until after he had received General Funston's reply to the invitation, which caused the commander of the Chinese forces to jump 500 miles to his own yard in Los Angeles, where he is said to be giving an excellent imitation of a man in deep and profound thought.

The public is already familiar with the Chinese Reform Association's "army," comprising companies in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Victoria, Chicago and Honolulu aggregating probably 1000 young men and boys, drilling with rifles under American officers for the

KAHUKU'S NEW PHYSICIAN

DR. BRUCE M.V. MACKALL, KAHUKU PLANTATION PHYSICIAN.

A noted physician has come to make his future home in the islands, Dr. Bruce M.V. Mackall, who passed the requisite examination in Honolulu the other day, and who has been appointed as resident physician at Kahuku Plantation. Dr. Mackall graduated from Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., and almost immediately after taking his degree was appointed one of the resident physicians at the Washington Government Hospital, where he was given charge of the insane ward and had a wide and varied experience in insanity cases, being often called as an expert in court.

He was later appointed Acting Assistant Surgeon in the United States Hospital Service, being stationed at Portland, Maine, where he likewise engaged in private practice. Believing, however, that the west offered wider opportunities for young men, he went to San Francisco, where he presently accepted a position as surgeon of the steamship Alameda, with a view to eventual settlement in Hawaii. The Kahuku appointment followed and Dr. Mackall now takes rank with the ablest and best read island medical men.

purpose of being ready when the tocsin sounds to depose the Empress Dowager of China and seat her son firmly on the throne. Of the $1 or more a month each that the 40,000 or more members of the reform association pays into the war chest under the control of Kwang Yu Wei, probably only he and a few of his generals and admirals know anything about. This fund is said to have been paid in at the rate of about $500,000 a year for three or four years.

PREVIOUS TROUBLES.

Previous to the invitation in question the last incident to bring this "army" before the public was the conflict of authority between Generals Homer Lea and R. A. Falkenberg, the latter claiming to be the really, truly, commanding General, with his name blown in his commission by the great seal of China. Then Lea, who had been camping close to the man with the key to the war chest, returned with him from some port in Southern China, and from temporary headquarters in Los Angeles issued an order, edict, pronouncement or something like that declaring himself and saying things about his fellow commanding General. Falkenberg did not "come back" at him, and for a commanding General, a Vice-Regent, an Ambassador Extraordinary and a Minister Plenipotentiary he has since been remarkably quiet. There is a deep and awful suspicion that some of his friends "jollied" General Lea into sending the invitation to dine to the commander of the Department of California. That leads up to the cause of this story.

A few days ago a dapper little Chinese, Wong Kim, an address clerk in the local postoffice, invaded the United States Army headquarters in the Phelan building. He was accompanied by "Captain" Faneuf, formerly an enlisted man in the Tenth Pennsylvania and who served in the Philippines. Wong Kim was dressed in the uniform of a Captain of United States Cavalry with the exception of the insignia, which was the Chinese dragon instead of the American coat of arms. To General Funston he presented an invitation to dine at one of the swell restaurants in the city. This invitation was signed "General Lea."

NOT KNOWN TO FUNSTON.

"Who is General Lea; who made him a General, the President or the Governor of some State?" asked General Funston. The reply was not satisfactory and caused General Funston to look more closely at the man in uniform, and when he saw he was a Chinese the General grew indignant.

"Who on earth gave you the right to wear that uniform," he demanded. "Who made you a Captain?" Again the answer was not satisfactory. The terse and emphatic verbal reply declining the invitation was then delivered and the two made their escape. Shortly after "General" Lea left the Palace Hotel and said his next address would be Los Angeles.

It was a neat job, that invitation. If it had been accepted there probably would have been present a dozen or more of the wealthiest and most prominent Chinese in the city. It would not only have "climaxed" the confidence of the Chinese to "General" Lea, but would have enabled him to point to the fact that the reform forces were recognized by the United States Army. Now his greatest thought is not as to his report on the failure of his strategic movement—that is easy, and begins "I regret to report," etc. What troubles him most is the fact that he has caused the Government of the United States to sit up and take notice of the fact that illegally armed bodies of foreigners are organizing and drilling in the United States for the purpose of engaging in a rebellion against the lawfully constituted authority of a power with which the United States is on terms of peace and amity, and that such action on the part of said organized and armed bodies is 'contrary to the statutes made and provided."

AGAINST STATE LAW.

There is a State law against armed bodies without the sanction of the Governor that covers the case and if the object of the cadet companies in question is established a provost guard from the several Army posts in the cities named will probably seize and confiscate the arms of the Reform Association.

However, he relies, probably, on the testimony of the 40,000 or more members of the Reform Association, who will declare that these cadet companies are merely social organizations designed to keep the young Chinese off the street or away from gambling dens. This they assert when asked about the purposes of the cadets. This may keep the heavy hand of the United States from falling, but there is the State of California to reckon with. "General" Lea may be trying to solve the problem with the petals of a marguerite to the tune of "I Am It; I Am Not It."

WHAT DRESSMAKER SAYS.

Box-plaited box coats are extremely modish.

Clover leaf patterns appear in a number of silks.

Usually the soft toned grays look well with yellow or brown hair.

Basket weaves are much in evidence.

Elaborate tucking in yoke effect serves to perfect the fit of many a dress skirt.

Trailing skirts shortened immediately across the back are supposed by the wily Frenchwoman to make her appear younger.

Red is struggling hard, and successfully, too, to compete with its less brilliant rivals, but it is such a trying shade that few are bold enough to attempt it. When it is becoming there is really nothing lovelier, and strange as it may seem, its brightness is one of the summer's smartest fads.

FIGHTER AMONG IMMORTALS

Professional Pugilist of England
Whose Remains Lie in Westminster Abbey.

That a prize fighter is buried in Westminster abbey is widely known because it happens to be mentioned in the official deanery guide which every visitor buys, and many are the ejaculations of pious horror that have been uttered over such scandalous desecration of this most famous of all sanctuaries of the dead. But John Broughton is really much more worthy of such honor than many who are interred there, writes a London correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal. He was a great man in his way. He fought his way to the top of his profession and by pluck and hard hitting maintained himself there for several years. He lived to a green old age and was long employed as a verger in the abbey before he died in 1793. He wished to have the words, "Champion Prize Fighter of England," which constituted his claim to fame inscribed on his tombstone. But the then dean of the abbey would not permit it, and on the tablet to his memory in the West Cloister Broughton is commended to the remembrance of posterity merely as a "Yeoman of the Guard." When the time comes, as it must, when they will have to begin removing bones from the abbey to make room for those who are really deserving of interment there, honest John Broughton should not be the first to be disturbed.

Prize fighters are often popular idols, but it would be difficult to conceive of any occupation more remote from the paths that lead to glory than that of a plumber. Yet in the holy quiet of one of the cloisters of this temple of fame a plumber is buried—one Philip Clarke—for no other reason than that he fixed pipes and soldered up leaks for Westminster school. But no memorial will be found in the abbey of that soldier artificer whom the world can never forget, the immortal tinker, John Bunyan.

Otherwise Useless.

"We need a drawer or something to put these cuts away in," said the foreman of the country weekly.

"Haven't got any drawer now that's not in use," replied the editor.

"But, hold on! Yes, we have. Take the cash drawer."—Philadelphia Ledger.
